In typical on-car/off-car switching, to provide a fail-safe condition, the on-car/off-car switch on an automobile provides that, when the electrical load is switched off by the on-car/off-car switch, the oil pressure must remain in the system for a predetermined amount of time before the switch actuator is reset. This predetermined amount of time is used as an indicator that the oil pressure level in the system is at a safe level. If the oil pressure in the system drops below the predetermined level, the actuator is reset and the electrical load is turned on. In addition, the predetermined amount of time may also be used as an indicator of vehicle speed. Thus, a preset amount of time is provided for the system to reach a safe condition. A problem is that the predetermined amount of time is not easily controlled and varies with each system. More specifically, the amount of time required for the oil pressure to reach the predetermined level is not the same for all the systems in the automobile. It is not known in the prior art what amount of time should be provided for each system to reach the predetermined oil pressure level. Therefore, there is a need in the art for a method and system for controlling the predetermined amount of time required to reach the predetermined oil pressure level for each system. The present invention provides such a method and system.

Have you ever fallen in love with a movie so much that you can't stop watching it? Have you ever dreamt about the characters and you wake up the next morning telling yourself you need to see them again? The Magic Theatre has been doing that for 75 years, bringing in amateur actors and venturing into new works. "It's a small intimate space," says Artistic Director, Grace Annop. "It was created with an idea of bringing people together." A Play The Magic Theatre is not just a playhouse; it's an opportunity for one and all. It is not just the place where playwrights create their art; the Magic Theatre is also a space where playwrights watch each other, which is an experience in itself. The Magic Theatre has 82157476af
